Employers are frequently faced with difficult employment issues – from recruiting new hires to terminating employees. For health care professionals, each of these circumstances brings with it unique considerations and in some cases specific regulatory requirements.

This session aims to give health care professionals with small businesses the knowledge they need to correctly handle the wide-variety of employee issues that arise, including:

- The significance of being an employee or independent contractor
- What you need to know about non-compete clauses
- The importance of respectful workplace policies
- Resolving conflicts in the workplace
