EXPERTISE

Insurance Law
Health Law

Mark joined Harper Grey in 2019 with a dual focus on insurance and health law.

In his insurance practice, Mark represents insurers in various matters including property disputes, general insurance disputes and professional negligence. He has specific expertise in defending bodily injury claims.

On the health law side, Mark defends health professionals in civil matters.

Mark has appeared before the Provincial Court, Supreme Court, and the Human Rights Tribunal.

Mark also has expertise in wills and estate planning and estate administration. He can assist with the preparation of a Will, Power of Attorney, or Representation Agreement. He can also assist with the death or incapacity of a loved one, including helping executors of an estate fulfill their duties, providing assistance and advice when a Will is absent and preparing applications for the appointment of a committee.

Mark completed both his bachelor's degree and law degree at the University of British Columbia and was called to the BC Bar in 2014. Mark has volunteered with Access Pro Bono since his call to the bar, providing assistance to low income individuals.
